Enviro-Stories is an innovative literacy education program that inspires learning about natural resource and catchment management issues. Developed by PeeKdesigns, this program provides students with an opportunity to publish their own stories that have been written for other kids to support learning about their local area.

What is a Totem?

It is an animal or plant given to you at birth that your family has a special connection to.
What does having a Totem mean?

It means you are responsible for looking after that animal or plant and its habitat.
How do you look after your totem?

You never, ever kill your totem animal.
How do you look after the habitat?

Make sure you have enough trees for climbing, resting and hunting.
Does everyone have the same totem?

No. The Aboriginal Nations have many different totems.
What does this mean for the environment?

This means there is always someone looking out for an animal and its habitat.
How do Aboriginal people look after their totem?

They paint the totem on things they own.

Today, we make posters and logos about them.
Aboriginal people learn about their totem through ceremonies, Dreaming stories and by watching them.

Today, we can read their stories and do projects about them.

How the Kangaroo got its tail.
Aboriginal people sing songs and tell stories so that everyone knows about their totem.

Today, we can make TV ads and movies about the animals.
Aboriginal people left safe places for their totem to live and avoided killing them.

Today, we can also protect their environment, make safe places, like national parks, and stop killing them.
If I had a totem, I would like it to be a Rock Wallaby.

I can protect it by not hunting it and by looking after its habitat.
Everyone has their own totem.

What would yours be?
